MR. ROCKEFELLER'S EAGLE
STONE.

Few men talk themselves into a job, but many lose it that way.

Nearly everybody can talk, and most of us overdo the accomplishment.

A man can build a substantial credit without an architect's blue prints.

No man will ever be competent to give order until he learns to obey them.

All the squirrels are never found up one tree, unless it is a family tree.

That Billie Possum business went off like a heavy frost ahead of the rising sun.

The family horse, when treated like a member of the family, ceases to be a family horse.

The trouble is with most of us, we can't hamstring the ideas and get hold of them, as they fit by.

T. V. White, a route 5 subscriber, was in to see us Saturday and make a payment for the paper.

If lots of little boys are your friends now, and you treat them right, there will come a time when you will have lots of friends among men.

The Brownsville soldiers will never down, it would seem, till they have a short, stout marble slab placed endwise over their heads.

"Winter has lingered lovingly in spring's lap," but no one has dug up the old joke, and we don't propose to start the digging here.

That fashion plate man is still sitting on the rock, way out in the woods; or waving his hat at the winner as he comes, or firing the pistol as a signal for the race to start. Hardly any of them work.

We corn raisers, and cornbread eaters of Alabama can show the wheat market that we are not obliged to buy wheat. Could show 'em if we wanted to, mind you, for we make other things that will keep one in fair order till the berries are ripe.

Sherman is no doubt a modest man, but his silence is no sign of it, for who ever heard of a vice president doing anything, or saying anything, after he was elected? Of course, we bar Roosevelt.

Twenty years ago, it was a common thing to walk into a church and hear a sermon preached by a man who lisped like a weak-lunged bicycle pump; but you don't hear him any more. Something has gone with the practical lispers. They either had their teeth fixed, or became ashamed of it.

It was never any trouble to find a man to act as official axman, when the ax was used across the neck of the one whose time was up. It seems no trouble to find an umpire, as much as they all seem to need killing each season. A gruesome job has no terrors for some men.

A man by the name of Clark, from California, lived in Chicago way back yonder, for some cause or another. He visited Chicago the other day, because his son lives there, and it somehow became known that the old man had a corn off and quit drinking seventy-five years ago. How he must want a drink, some one would remark, but possibly he doesn't care for it. He is 92 years old, but doesn't attribute his longevity to prohibition. He remarked, however, that the liquor sold in his younger days in Chicago was enough to make a man swear off.

People who haunt boarding houses say that a concoction called hash, which may be anything, or a dozen things, can be warmed over, and changed about from meal to meal, till one must eat it to get it off the table. When one goes about writing something for a lot of choice readers, he thinks of how he will serve the hash; how it can best be changed so the readers will devour it, without feeling like devouring the writer.

TALKING WITH MARS

Professor William Henry Pickering is not known much this far South of Boston. Boston, or Harvard College, is where the professor lives and teaches astronomy. The professor was not being quoted as much as Dr. Eliot, or Dr. Wiley, or Dr. Oaker, or Dr. Mary Walker, or Dr. Washington. This must have goaded him into making the statement the other day, that it would soon be possible to talk to the people in Mars. That is, if it were possible to extract about $10,000,000 from some source to arrange the talking machine the professor wants. His idea would be to make a mirror something to over about a quarter of a mile of space, and wait till the proper season of the year when Mars is five million miles closer to earth, and then let the reflection of the sun flash dots and dashes to the Maritans. With this they might see the signal, but they many not know Morse, in which case the professor thinks a code would soon be worked out whereby we might hold conversation every sunshiny day with Mars.

When a man comes to believe a certain thing will happen at a certain time, it is likely to occur. That is, it looks that way at times. The other day a strong, healthy mail carrier in Georgia got it in his head that he wouldn't live till the next Sunday. He said as much to his wife, and told the doctor that something would surely happen, but the physician told him there was nothing the matter, though he gave him a little bottle of medicine to take. He went ahead and became unconscious and died before the following Sunday.

IT'S GOOD.

If all could get plenty of the old time corn meal, and all the cooks knew how to prepare it for eating, there would be less cause for worry over the price of flour.—Montgomery Advertiser.

The Corn Meal Editor of the Advertiser has said something before along this line, and it is possible that he knows a good thing in corn bread when he eats it. He may like it cooked in pones, ready for shelling in potliquoer, or he may like it made up soft—in hot water, and spread out thin over a baker, and then baked and turned till the crust is crisp, with plenty of grease in the spider. Then he may like the bacon sliced thin—not "breakfast bacon," but the kind we raise here in Alabama and cure with hickory smoke, which is good for breakfast, supper or dinner. This sort of bread is alright for buttering on one side, or both, or in the middle. It's good.

A SUCCESSFUL PREACHER

A Chicago Methodist preacher resigned his job to take another just about like it in New Mexico. He did this thinking the change would be beneficial to the health of his daughter. This preacher was like a hundred and ten thousand others, in a financial way. He had never saved any money, for he had never received more than he needed as a salary.

On reaching Mexico he got a chance to pick up a ranch at a tax sale. Property went up and a year or two ago he was rated in the hundred thousand dollars class. With another lucky deal or two in farms and ranches his profits grew, till now he is worth $500,000, and during his successful deals in real estate, he has never been absent from his pulpit on Sunday, and has shown up on prayer meeting nights, even when it looked like rain, and the weather was cold, and a show was in town. He has been attending to his Master's work and, in so doing, his own business has taken care of itself.

Luncheon Complimentary to Mrs. Williams McCarthy of Atlanta.

Tuesday, at one o'clock, at her home on Rose Hill, Mrs. R. T. Ghent entertained a most congenial number of ladies in honor of Mrs. Williams McCarthy, at an April shower luncheon.

Mrs. McCarthy, who numbers her friends by the legion in Dothan, is always bright and fascinating, and at this luncheon, at the request of the hostess she gave in a most delightful manner the most thrilling experience of her life, which was followed by similar interesting events related by the other ladies present.

The dining room had for decoration, pink roses and asparagus fern, on the mantel and buffet were crystal vases holding these beautiful flowers and on the table, resting upon a lace center piece, was a basket holding pink roses, the handle decorated with blue maline, which terminated in a large bow tied to the handle of an open blue umbrella, which was suspended from the chandelier. Blue ribbons were attached to the corners of the umbrella by a large pink rose, and reached to the plates, where was tied the place cards. The place cards were hand painted wild roses and forget-me-nots and on the back was written "May the lightest April shower

Be the hardest storm of your darkest hour."

At the conclusion of the five-course luncheon, Mrs. Ghent had her guests to record their names in a beautiful guest book, hand painted, with the same design of the place cards, the lovely handiwork of the little daughter of the hostess.

After the luncheon dominos were enjoyed. At the tables pink fudge was served in silver filagree bon-bon dishes.

Those present were, Mrs. Williams McCarthy, Mrs. Wallace Hunter, Mrs. W. F. McClellan, Mrs. W. H. Grant, Mrs. Carrie Mabrey Nix, Mrs. Henry Green, Miss Daisy Simonton.

D. & L. Club Entertained By Jennie Mae Ward.

Saturday afternoon, at three o'clock, Jennie Mae Ward entertained delightfully for the D. and L. Club. Whittier was the subject and each member gave a quotation from this author; then for awhile, dominos were played, followed by the game, "A penny for your thoughts."

At the conclusion partners were chosen and the barn dance was enjoyed for a jolly half hour, after which fruit punch was served. The next club meeting will be with Janie Farmer.

The country parson was condoling with the bereft widow.

"Alas!" he continued, earnestly, "I cannot tell you how pained I was to learn that your husband had gone to heaven. We were bosom friends, but we shall never meet again."—Lippincott's Magazine.

"A CONSENSUS"

Does our present idea of social reformation give that relief which its votaries claim? Are we tending toward stronger and firmer convictions, in regard to taste and feeling, which sustain the physical and promote the mental? Or are our efforts covered with fern, which, if supplanted by individual conduct would place us on an equality with those who seek to change. Which is it, the newly made forms of life, which we seek to propagate to better ourselves and others; or are we engaged in an effort, to put these forms into effect, to take the chills off of our own inward selfishness? Answer. Oh! for a microscope to see ourselves six days as we are, then for one on the seventh, to see ourselves as we appear. Various kinds of emotions produce indigestion, as well as errors in Diet. For this take Holland Dyspeptic Elixir. If care and exertion has worn your physical form, so that the body appears lean and the muscles hard; if your appetite is gone, take Hollan's Spring Blood Tonic. Our labels are true to name, and represent no more than we claim for the medicines.

If you have backache and urinary troubles you should take Foley's Kidney Remedy to strengthen and build up the kidneys so they will last properly, as a serious kidney trouble may develop. N. H. McCallum.

BATTLE CAUGHT.

Tom Battle, who escaped jail here a few days ago, was caught at Noma, Fla., and Sheriff Butler went down yesterday evening for him. John Sanders and A. B. Carroll went down with Tom, making the trip on Mr. Sanders' automobile, the time required for the trip there and back being five hours.

J. H. Borland left today for a several weeks trip through the west. He will visit Mobile, Fort Worth and Dallas; Salt Lake, San Francisco, all the principal cities of the west.

During the spring every one would be benefitted by taking Foley's Kidney Remedy. It furnishes a needed tonic to the kidneys after the extra strain of winter, and it purifies the blood by stimulating the kidneys, and causing them to eliminate the impurities from it. Foley's Kidney Remedy imparts new life and vigor. Pleasant to take. N. H. McCallum.

REV. R. M. CRAIG WILL NOT LEAVE.

A few days ago, Rev. E. M. Craig, of the Presbyterian church, was offered the office of Superintendent of Home Mission work in the North Georgia Presbytery, with his home at Athens, Ga. He looked over the situation, and concluded to accept the call, if the church accepted his resignation, and it was acceptable to the East Alabama Presbytery.

The East Alabama Presbytery considered the matter carefully and decided that this Presbytery needed his services as much as any other, so it made him the offer of $1,500 salary, the same as would have been received from Georgia, and gave him the same appointment, that of Superintendent of Home Missions in the East Alabama Presbytery, which territory extends from the Florida line south, to Chambers county in the north, and as far west as Butler county. In accepting this work, his services as pastor of the church, the first Sunday in May.

Rev. Craig has the preference of living anywhere in this Presbytery he may see fit, and a strong effort is being made to have him remain here, as there seems no good reason why he should move to another town.

Since he has had charge of this church, a period extending over four or five years, he has done a great work in Dothan for his church, has made many friends who will bring every pressure to bear to keep him and his interesting family in Dothan.

DRANK PRUSSIC ACID.

Atlanta, Ga., April 19.—Preferring the chill of the grave to the ill of a prison cell and the proud to the garb of a convict, Rosa S. Monish drank prussic acid and died today, an hour after she had been sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth.

Deputy United States marshals, whose charge she had been, found her after they had opened the door to her room. Mrs. Monish has been more or less in the public eye in the South several years. She built a stateroom in the most aristocratic of Atlanta a few years ago, and the efforts of neighbors to prevent the opening of the place, for her methods came under the scrutiny of the postoffice inspectors, but it was not until she had a quarrel with her husband that the case could get evidence against her. They charged her with sending a young woman, and sending her conviction. Her attorney applied for a new trial and it overruled this morning by Judge Newman, who at once sentenced Dr. Monish to one year and one day in prison, and pay a fine of $1,000 on two counts.

Monish fainted when the sentence was imposed, but recovered and asked to go to her home. Officers consented, simply stating that they look her in and remain on guard. While her attorneys were making an appeal bond, she asked the officers to a cab and she took and went home to her room. About 2 p. m., she called to her to come to her room. Receiving no reply, she forced the door and found her prisoner dead on her bed, a long odor of bitter almonds, the story of death by hydrocyanic acid.

It was believed that Dr. Monish had the drug some time ago and she had her mind to die, if she could get a new trial. As a physician, she had no difficulty in getting the deadly drug. She was 35 years of age and beside her husband, also a physician, she leaves a daughter, Jeanette, aged thirteen.

POPULAR IDEAS OF GENIUS.

Dryden's famous line, "Great wits are sure to madness near allied," expresses a popular conviction that genius and eccentricity are inseparably associated. Edgar Allen Poe, who went through life "with his feet in the gutter and his head among the stars," has been cited many times in this year of his centenary as proof that genius necessarily is erratic. Byron, De Quincy, Lamb, Coleridge, Burns, Baudelaire and Francois Villon, all noted as well for their dissipation as for their inspired achievements, are held up as frequently perhaps to point the same argument. But does not this tradition rest on isolated cases rather than on any basis of general truth? If a few geniuses have been immoral or eccentric, a host of others have lived lives above reproach. Indeed, a glance at history would seem to prove beyond a doubt that erratic genius is the exception. The world's greatest geniuses, on their personal side, have been eminently normal and well balanced. But the popular myth that genius is abnormal has served to cover a multitude of sins in commonplace people. Men with a talent for attitudinizing adopt affectations in order to be mistaken for geniuses. They dress oddly, they wear their hair long, they affect melancholy, they assume supercilious airs, they dissipate.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SHOWING SIGNS.

The Dothan Eagle is showing signs of permanency and substantial prosperity. Editor Hall is demonstrating the fact that he can hustle when occasion demands hustling, and to establish a live daily, even in a live town, one must know the art of hustling. But there are hustlers and hustlers. Editor Hall seems to be built on the right plan. He gets results. He makes the people read his paper. He has a delightful way of interesting them. They are just bound to see what Editor Hall says—not so much as what he says, as how he says it. He is original or he is nothing. Editor Hall deserves the success in the daily field he is meeting with. All newspaper men in the state are delighted to know that Dothan has a daily paper, and that it promises to enliven the occasion of their meeting at Dothan in the spring.—Montgomery Journal.

Whether or not this paper "is showing signs of permanency" is not for us to say. This we know: we like this work and expect to stick to it as long as we live in Dothan, and we never expect to move.

There are men selling clothing who expect to make enough out of the business to enable them to farm, or to sell hardware, or groceries. There are men selling groceries who expect to quit as soon as they are able, and sell something else with more profit and less bad accounts. There may be lawyers who expect to retire when they have made enough to get in politics. There may be politicians who expect never to stand for re-election when they have secured the office this time, but who want to retire, or get back into business. There may be some doctors who expect to quit practice some day when they have made enough money, or else, specialize their work. There may be farmers who are going to give up farming as soon as they make one more good crop, and move to town to educate their children, or to take up something else. There may be bankers who expect to retire in a few years, and buy a nice little farm, and move out on it, to bring up the children in a healthy atmosphere, in hearing of the whippoorwill, in sight of the lightning bug, where they can enjoy a quiet smoke bare-footed, on the front veranda, and listen to the songs of the mocking bird in the early twilight. But—

We are not dreaming that dream, we are not figuring on doing something else when we get able. We have no other ambition in life than to make this a good paper, one that the people will read and pay for, and fuss with us about as little as possible. We have never had an idea of doing anything else since first we got hung in with this paper. Might do something else and see a real pay day, enjoy a real dividend occasionally, but if we do say it, money doesn't keep us awake nights. We merely want enough to pay bills when they are due, and keep a credit above reproach. We expect to stay in this business, solely because we like it, and get some pleasure out of life every blessed day, whether the sun shines or not. This is one editor who doesn't expect to ever retire or change jobs.

SPEECH.

The following eloquent address made at the Knights Templar banquet at Dothan last Friday night, is here reproduced by request: Eminent Commander, Sir Knights and Ladies:

Federalism paid courtly allegiance to beauty and the chivalry of Knighthood was a trophy at the feet of woman.

The permanence of our Knighthood is written in the experiences of men who have well considered the problem of life. Its cornerstone is the friendship of the ideals, its officers, the wants of humanity in every age. Its principles based on the life and character of the gloriously young and splendidly martyred leader of Christendom who nursed his youthful strength on imperishable ideals. He faced High Priests and Sanhedrims and the stony prejudices and frozen formalities of his people and awoke the enthusiasm of a faith in God which has kindled nineteen centuries. He is the spiritual Columbus of the ages who added the unseen world to the seen and enlarged, not by a hemisphere but by eternity, the narrow scope of man's mortal life.

The age in which we live is bristling with profits and losses and percentages. The war is on between commercialism and conscience and we are called upon to decide between greed and God. If this is true, then nothing could be more ennobling than for us to reflect upon these higher ideals which impel us to believe that there is more virtue than vice in the world and teaches us to have confidence in the fidelity of our friends.

A true friend is an oasis in the desert of life, a fountain of sparkling pure water to the shipwrecked mariner, a never failing supply of food in the midst of a famine, a haven of rest to the weary pilgrim, a lighthouse to the lost sailor, an Eden to the troubled soul. It is a God given principle implanted in man which reaches far out into the life to come. With outstretched arms and mellow voice he cries, "Come unto me for I am your friend, breathe into my ear your tale of woe, ease your burden upon my shoulder and I will help you to bear your cross." Finally, when your spirit soars away into life and light eternal, he moistens your grave with his tears and keeps it green in memory, with the happy recollection of the past and the glorious anticipation of a reunion, "In the Sweet Bye and Bye."

It is inspiring to meet about this board, where eye may greet eye and great hearts expand and grow as one. The poet sings of the echo of the cliff and crags as contrasted with the impact of human influence

"O love, they die on yon rich sky, They faint on hill or field or river; Our echoes roll from soul to soul, And grow forever and forever."

There is a higher influence than that which binds us as man to man. I believe that you will coalesce with me when I declare that I would not give one sweet, rosy-cheeked little woman for all the shades of all the men who have lived since Cataline con-sired and great Caesar fell.

God sent his angel messenger throughout all the star-strewn realms of space to gather all there was of beauty and brightness, of enchantment and glamour. These angels returned from their harvesting of beauty and threw down their glittering burdens at His feet. He wrought with the gold and gleam of stars. He wrought with the crimson which swooned in the roses, rubbed heart, with the pure sweet, snow which gleamed fires and flames which flash and leap from the jewel's depth. Then glancing deep into his own bosom, He took of the love that gleams there like some rare pearl beneath the wind-kissed waves of summer sea—into the form He was fashioning, and all Heaven veiled its face—for lo! He had wrought woman

A distinguished writer and speaker has given us the picture of the Paradise which was lost, but which our blessed women have helped us to regain. He wrote: "I think it was the very dream of God glowing with ineffable beauty. I think it was rimmed with blue mountains, from whose moss-covered cliffs a thousand glassy streams spread out in mid air like bridal veils, kissing a thousand rainbows from the sun. I think it was an archipelago of gorgeous colors, flecked with green isles, where grapevines staggered from tree to tree as if drunk with the wine of their own purple clusters, and where peach and plum and blood-red cherries bent bow and hush and shone like showered drops of ruby and of pearl. I think it was a wilderness of flowers, redolent of eternal spring and pulsing with bird song, where dappled fawns lay on banks of violets, where leopards peaceful and tame lounged among corpses of magnolias, where harmless tigers lay on beds of lilies and where lions lazy and gentle panted amid jungles of roses. And there in some lovely bower slept Adam, the first of the human race, Godlike in form and feature, Godlike in all the attributes of mind and soul. No monarch ever slept on softer, sweeter couch, with richer curtains about him. And as he slept, a face and form, half hidden, half revealed, red-lipped, rose-cheeked, white-bosomed and resses of gold smiled like an angel from the mirror of his dream, for a moment smiled and so sweetly that his heart almost forgot to beat. Then with tenderest touch an unseen hand lay open the unconscious flesh and forth from the painless wound a faultless being sprang, a being as pure and as blithesome as the air, a sinless woman, God's first gift for the happiness of man."

May you ladies reign as queens of our homes, queens in the highest and noblest sense, swaying an imperial sceptre over human hearts. There, in the eye of all that is pure and beautiful shall be your trophies of reward. As Sir Knights, we claim your constancy. Not only in the rose of the morning nor at the repose of twilight that brings an easy fidelity, but at high white noon amid tumult in the race for place for wealth and position, remember us praying that your own dear hearts may be true to your better self.

May you ladies always be
As now you are the priceless pearls

Of earth and sky and sea.
And may our Southland ever bound

The blossoms of your race,
Till time's own twilight deepens round

Your grandeur and your grace."

FRENCH WARSHIPS

HURRYING TO MERSINA

Christians Have Taken Refuge in Consulates.

Constantinople, April 18.—Confirmation has been received here of the killing of two American missionaries at Adana.

The murdered missionaries were Mr. Rogers and Mr. Maurer. The others connected with the missions are safe, including Mr. Christie, who is at Tarsus.

Three French warships are hurrying to Mersina, where the situation is desperate. Foreigners and many Christians have taken refuge in many consulates. The troops and the Governor are doing their best to protect the town, but there is great fear that it cannot hold on much longer against the invasion of the Moslems, who are sweeping down in large numbers. The American vice consul at Mersina, John Debbas, has been unable to proceed to Adana, owing to interruption of communication.

A British warship is proceeding to Alexandretta, which is threatened by the Moslems. The tension at Constantinople is great although this afternoon there seemed to be some prospects of a peaceful solution of the trouble. The people of the capital are more concerned with the advance of the Salonik troops than with the massacres reported from various quarters. The army which is concentrating at Tehatalje has promised not to enter Constantinople but to await there the fulfillment of its demands.

The officers of the Saloniki army control the train service to Europe, and the service, as a consequence, is much delayed. The council of ministers took the demands of the troops under advisement. The first of these seems to be easy of solution, provided the deputies agree to return. The second demand, however, involving the punishment of the ringleader will be difficult to meet, and might cause trouble. Constantinople is now tranquil although the public is exceedingly nervous and apprehensive. The garrison appears to be under better discipline, and the troops have taken the oath on the Koran to remain quiet and obey the officers.

According to the latest news from Adana, the missionaries do not dare to leave the mission house. They are suffering from lack of provisions and medicines, and have sent an appeal to the military authorities for protection. Adana is still burning and it is estimated that not less than 3,000 persons are homeless at Tarsus.

The excellent address published in yesterday's Advertiser, "Calvin, Father of Modern Missions," was delivered before the Southeast Alabama Presbytery at Dothan, by Rev. R. B. Morrow, of West Point, Ga. The note accompanying the address sent from Dothan, requested its publication on behalf of a number of Presbyterians, but the note failed to say who had delivered it. The subject was presented so forcefully and interestingly, however, that the address was good enough to be published, no matter who delivered it. It was, therefore, set in type, with the intention of giving due credit to the author of it as soon as his name was learned. So, in carrying out this intention, the Advertiser's readers are informed that it was delivered by Rev. R. B. Morrow, and it met at Dothan the appreciation that it deserved.

—Montgomery Advertiser.

NOT SO YOUNG.

Dothan is a young town, as towns go, but we don't think the country lying adjacent to this town evidently has abroad.

You may not get at what we mean from this. We will try another way. If this town didn't have the name of being easy, we have often remarked with some caution, we wouldn't be overrun all the time by gold-brick schemers. We don't know of a single man in Houston County who has ever bought that kind of brick, but some may have purchased other grades that closely resembled it and said nothing about it. And that's one good trait our people have. If one gets stung, he doesn't go around with the place done up showing it for sympathy. He holds his tongue and he's very much wiser. And he is wiser.

During the past few days we have been visited, that is, some of the moneyed men have, by some old mine, or silver or copper mine gentlemen—we don't remember just exactly what kind of mining stock they were over-loaded with, but they had some which could be spared, and came down to Dothan to put a chosen few on the ground floor of a grand new mining enterprise, in Nevada or some equally inaccessible state, too far off, at least, to go out and look over the property before buying.

For the town to be visited by gentlemen who have more mining stock than they need, is, to our way of putting it, a reflection on the town's intelligence. Just because we have had a town here, but a couple of decades, is not reason why the fishers-after-men, or suckers, should pull the line out of good fishing holes and drop the bait down in our puddle. We don't swallow everything that looks good. We are rather cautious, and most of us figure that if we had a mine in a mine out west, or in South Africa, we'd keep it in the family, and not travel half across the continent to sell a few shares to an unknown people, a people that might not appreciate so good a thing, if they had it.

The men offering this stock to the select few have been here a couple of weeks and it was reported to us that one of them walked out with a beaver and an Ella, the first day, but this must have been an error. He only wore a particularly keenly ground Vandyke beard. He was a Frenchman, which he wasn't; had the leisurely air of a retired capitalist, or prosperous professional man; but either, likely. If they sold any of their green certificates, non-assessable stock, the men who purchased are silent on the subject.

BE ON TIME.

It is an easy matter to be on time. Few people ever get left who are going away on a railroad, because they know they must be there on schedule.

In the course of a lifetime many months are lost by one having to wait unnecessarily on some one else. There is the simple wait that usually occurs in the filling of a business engagement set for a certain hour, which will count during a lifetime; then the time that one loses by not being ready for dinner when the bell rings; amounts to something. A boy who is not taught to be ready for a meal way before it is ready, will be late for all the good things of life, if he is not broken from the habit. He shouldn't wait until after the bell announces dinner to go and wash his face, yet many do it. He shouldn't be ten minutes late at school, nor even one minute, seeing how he will be just a little ahead of time at the ball game or the circus.

The value of being on time cannot be drilled into the head at too early an age. The idea should be firmly fixed that it is not polite to be late, socially, and that if he is to call at two o'clock to attend to some business, two ten may not be acceptable.

There are some who are always a little late at church, and Sunday school, a habit contracted, no doubt, from attending theatres, where no one is expected to be on time, and especially the performers.

You have the same right to be ten dollars shy in a sixty dollar settlement as you have to be ten minutes late, when there are but sixty minutes to the hour. Time is worth more now than ever before. It's getting dearer every day, too, and you should learn to economize on it.

The banker, for all we know, has a higher regard for the man who calls and renews his note the day it's due, than he would have if the man went on for several days after it was due, and actually paid it.

WILL WAGE WAR ON FLIES.

Going after "cause" with their usual tireless energy, the members of the Anti-Tuberculosis League are endeavoring to have the City Council pay more attention to an ordinance introduced in the Council almost a year ago, in reference to the danger from flies.

Dr. Greil says the most adaptable breeding place for flies is stable litter, and as long as there are stables in the city and refuse from the stables piled in the yards, unscreened, flies will continue their work of spreading germs.

"With a microscope, tuberculosis, typhoid, malaria, and other germs can be counted on the legs of flies, by the hundred," Dr. Greil says, "and every time they alight they leave germs, a little colony of them, that the draft from an open door may blow into the air, to be inhaled by the passing person."

"The danger from flies, bred by the thousand all over the city, in manure piles, cannot be overestimated; they are the most prolific disease spreaders, that is, for diseases of every description that are known."

"To combat their work the following ordinance was introduced in the City Council last June. It was referred to a committee, and has not been officially heard from since:

Be it ordained by the City Council of Montgomery, as follows:

"That after the passage of this ordinance, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation, their or its premises, within the city limits of Montgomery, or within the jurisdiction thereof of any pile or deposit of manure, except in places carefully screened with fourteen inch mesh wire.

"Section 2. Any person convicted of violating Section one of this ordinance shall be fined not less than $100."

Another ordinance, introduced and passed, Dr. Greil says, in that in reference to refuse cans, which ordinance is not enforced. It ising all sorts of germs and the

as follows:

"Be it ordained by the City Council of Montgomery, as follows:

"That after the passage of this ordinance it be unlawful for any place upon public streets, places or alleys of city of Montgomery, any garbage, except in galvanized iron cans with closed tops.

"Second. Any violation of Section 1 of this ordinance shall be punishable by a fine of not less than $100.

Need More Laws.

Dr. Greil said yesterday in speaking of the matter, that the work of the Anti-Tuberculosis league was retarded and its good seriously lessened, by the fact that there is not enough laws, or those in existence were not sufficient to the work that is needed. He says the prevention work in fighting tuberculosis is the greatest thing the league can do, but as things stand, the league can only suggest and inform for the laws that would make their ground the fight, are practically nil, as far as the authorities are concerned.

"With the welfare of the community in mind," Dr. Greil said, "there should not be a stable inside the city limits that is not given the most thorough sanitary attention, by screening its refuse. Better still, it would be if there were not a stable in the city."

The work of having these laws enforced will be kept before the league, the leaguers say, until something is done that will have the laws passed and enforced that will enable the league to carry out the great undertaking.

In speaking of the flies, one of the local physicians said:

"They breed very rapidly and are hardily constituted, it takes an exceptional cold wave to kill them, hot weather is their best friend. They travel at great speed and can reach a dining table from any part of a house in a moment. Fresh from some orgy in filth, the alight on the food, on the table, walk over it, distribute all sorts of germs and the

"MODERN ANANIAS."

In the play last night at the Elite Theatre the rendition of Modern Ananias was good. Interest was strong from the opening to the closing, each character filling his or her place well in the play.

Doubtless most of us felt that there was more to be revealed in the positiveness of Lysander with his vivid imagination, than that of his uncle Col. Lyon, with its sickly sentimentalism. Force and power, though often misdirected, are of more value to the world than that of weakness and vacillation.

BIRMINGHAM'S RECORD OF HOMICIDES.

Birmingham, Ala., Apr. 21.—Coroner Brasher announced tonight that his records show thirty-four homicides committed in Jefferson county for the first twenty days of April.

This is an average of slightly over three every two days and is believed to be the highest record ever attained in the county.

"Unconsciously the suction pads of their feet take up every germ that the pad comes in contact with, but when they walk in the position of animals, the suction pads are not in action, and so the crowded air cells release step."

Continuing he said: "It is my candid opinion that half the ills that flesh is heir to are the direct result of their being spread by flies."—From Montgomery Advertiser, April 19, 1909.
